

Where's Snowy?

Now look at the pictures of Snowy and the chair. Ask your child to point to one picture and ask, 'Where's Snowy?' Help them to tell you, 'Snowy is on the chair,' etc so that they use all the words listed.

Now play the same game using one of your child's favourite toy animals and help them tell you exactly where the animal is in a sentence. If you want, also write the words on pieces of paper and ask the child to place the words next to the toy when it is in that position.

If you've got one of the Where's Spot? books, it's a great way of helping your child use these sorts of words. Your child's teacher probably calls these words prepositions because they tell you the position of things.
